

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF PUERTO RICO

LUIS A. MEDINA-VELAZQUEZ, et al.

Plaintiffs,

v.

CIVIL NO. 09-1692 (GAG)

RUBEN HERNANDEZ-GREGORAT et al.

Defendants.

OPINION AND ORDER

In this civil rights case, the remaining plaintiffs, Luis M. Medina-Velasquez (“Medina-Velasquez”), his spouse Marlene J. Paredes (“Paredes”) and their conjugal partnership, Juan J. Mendez-Cruz (“Mendez-Cruz”), his spouse Mayra Méndez-Quñones (“Méndez-Quñones”) and their conjugal partnership, and Hector R. Cruz-Medina (“Cruz-Medina”),¹ claim that their constitutional rights were violated by the defendants, Rubén A. Hernández-Gregorat (“Hernández-Gregorat”), Juan A. Avilés-Hernández (“Avilés-Hernández”), Amilcar González-Ortiz (“González-Ortiz”), Maria M. Trinidad-Quñones (“Trinidad-Quñones”), Woldetrudis Cruz-Torres (“Cruz-Torres”) and Luz del C. Roldán-Sotomayor (“Roldán-Sotomayor”).² (Docket No. 29 at 3.) Plaintiffs claim they suffered political discrimination by the defendant employers. (Docket No. 261 at 2.)

² Several defendants have been dismissed pursuant to the court’s judgment in response to the first motion to dismiss (Docket No. 117) and by settlement agreement (Docket No. 199.)

Civil No. 09-1692 (GAG/BJM)

1 Presently before the court is the defendants' motion for summary judgment of the claims 2 contained in the plaintiffs' second amended complaint. (Docket No. 251 at 2-4.)

I. Relevant Factual and Procedural Background

4 The plaintiffs are a group of employees employed by various branches of the Department 5 of Transportation and Public Works for the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico ("DTOP"). The 6 defendants are a group of directing officers at various branches of a number of agencies within 7 DTOP. All plaintiffs are members of the Popular Democratic Party ("PDP"). (Docket No. 29 ¶ 8 45.) Defendants are members of the New Progressive Party ("NPP"). (Docket No. 29 ¶ 48.) In 9 their second amended complaint, the plaintiffs contend that the defendants discriminated against 10 them based on political affiliation. (Docket No. 29 ¶ 56, 58.) Specifically, the plaintiffs claim 11 that they suffered curtailment of their supervisory responsibilities, circumvention of their 12 authority, and exclusion from meetings because of their PDP affiliation. (Docket No. 261 at 2.)

13 The plaintiffs seek preliminary and permanent injunction to restore benefits associated 14 with their employment positions. They also seek damages for alleged violations of their rights 15 under the First, Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution, as well as under 16 Sections 1, 4, 6 and 7 of Article II of the Constitution of Puerto Rico, Law No. 184 of August 3, 17 P.R. LAWS ANN. Tit. 3, § 1462h, and Articles 1802 and 1803 of the Civil Code of Puerto Rico, 18 P.R. LAWS ANN. Tit. 31, §§ 5141-42.

19 The plaintiffs filed their original complaint on July 22, 2009. (Docket No. 1.) Since then, 20 they have amended their complaint twice, adding additional plaintiffs, defendants and claims.
21 (Docket Nos. 9, 10, 29.) On August 27, 2010, the court dismissed the claims of plaintiffs 22 Medina-Velásquez, Méndez-Cruz and Cruz-Medina. (Docket Nos. 93, 117.) The First Circuit

Civil No. 09-1692 (GAG/BJM)

1 vacated the dismissal, but narrowed the plaintiffs' claims to political discrimination claims under 2 the First Amendment. (Docket No. 214.)

3 Pursuant to the First Circuit's opinion, the following claims remain: (1) Medina-4 Velázquez's First Amendment claim and Paredes' derivative claim against Rubén Hernández-5 Gregorat, Juan Avilés-Hernández, María Trinidad-Quñones and Woldetrudis Cruz-Torres; (2) 6 Méndez-Cruz's First Amendment claim and Mayra Méndez-Quñones's derivative claim against 7 Luz del Carmen Roldán-Sotomayor, Hernández-Gregorat and Avilés-Hernández; and (3) Cruz-8 Medina's First Amendment claim against Trinidad-Quñones, Hernández-Gregorat, Avilés-9 Hernández, and González-Ortiz. (Docket No. 214 at 21.) The Court of Appeals remanded the 10 case for resolution of these First Amendment claims. (Id.)

11 The defendants moved for summary judgment in 2012. (Docket Nos. 146, 148, 152, 154 12 and 156.) After the court conducted a hearing on these motions, all five were denied because the 13 court concluded that genuine issues of material fact existed as to all defendants, which must be 14 resolved by a jury. (Docket No. 184).

II. Standard of Review

16 Summary judgment is appropriate when "the pleadings, depositions, answers to 17 interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no 18 genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a 19 matter of law." Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).
20 "An issue is genuine if 'it may reasonably be resolved in favor of either party' at trial, . . . and 21 material if it 'possess[es] the capacity to sway the outcome of the litigation under the applicable 22 law.'" Iverson v. City of Boston, 452 F.3d 94, 98 (1st Cir. 2006) (alteration in original) (internal

Civil No. 09-1692 (GAG/BJM)

1 citations omitted). The moving party bears the initial burden of demonstrating the lack of 2 evidence to support the non-moving party's case. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 325. "The movant must 3 aver an absence of evidence to support the nonmoving party's case. The burden then shifts to the 4 nonmovant to establish the existence of at least one fact issue which is both genuine and 5 material." Maldonado-Denis v. Castillo-Rodriguez, 23 F.3d 576, 581 (1st Cir. 1994). The 6 nonmovant may establish a fact is genuinely in dispute by citing particular evidence in the record 7 or showing that either the materials cited by the movant "do not establish the absence or presence 8 of a genuine dispute, or that an adverse party cannot produce admissible evidence to support the 9 fact." Fed. R.Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(B). If the court finds that some genuine factual issue remains, the 10 resolution of which could affect the outcome of the case, then the court must deny summary 11 judgment. See Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986).

12 When considering a motion for summary judgment, the court must view the evidence in 13 the light most favorable to the nonmoving party and give that party the benefit of any and all 14 reasonable inferences. Id. at 255. Moreover, at the summary judgment stage, the court does not 15 make credibility determinations or weigh the evidence. Id. Summary judgment may be 16 appropriate, however, if the nonmoving party's case rests merely upon "conclusory allegations, 17 improbable inferences, and unsupported speculation." Forestier Fradera v. Mun. of Mayaguez, 18 440 F.3d 17, 21 (1st Cir. 2006) (quoting Benoit v. Technical Mfg. Corp., 331 F.3d 166, 173 (1st 19 Cir. 2003)).

III. Legal Analysis

21 Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the plaintiffs claim that the defendants violated their First 22 Amendment rights by stripping them of a substantial portion of their duties at work because of

Civil No. 09-1692 (GAG/BJM)

1 their political affiliation with the PDP. (Docket No. 29 ¶ 183.) In order to state a valid Section 2 1983 claim, the plaintiffs must establish three elements: (1) that the conduct complained of was 3 committed by a person acting “under color of state law;” (2) that the conduct deprived the 4 plaintiffs of rights secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States; and (3) that the 5 defendants were personally and directly involved in the causing the violation of federally 6 protected rights. E.g., Gutierrez-Rodriguez v. Cartagena, 882 F.2d 553, 560-61 (1st Cir. 1989) 7 (citations omitted).

8 The First Amendment protects non-policymaking public employees from adverse 9 employment action due to political affiliation. E.g., Rutan v. Republican Party of Ill., 497 U.S.
10 62, 75-76 (1990); Padilla-Garcia v. Guillermo Rodriguez, 212 F.3d 69, 74 (1st Cir. 2000). To 11 establish a prima facie case of political discrimination, a plaintiff must demonstrate that: (1) the 12 plaintiff and the defendant belong to opposing political affiliations; (2) the defendant had 13 knowledge of the plaintiff’s opposing political affiliation; (3) an adverse employment action 14 occurred, and; (4) political affiliation was a substantial or motivating factor behind the challenged 15 employment action. See Martinez-Velez v. Rey-Hernandez, 506 F.3d 32, 39 (1st Cir. 2007); 16 Peguero-Moronta v. Santiago, 464 F.3d 29, 48 (1st Cir. 2006). Additionally, the plaintiff “must 17 make a fact-specific showing that a causal connection exists between the adverse treatment and 18 the plaintiff’s political affiliation.” Aviles-Martinez v. Monroig, 963 F.2d 2, 5 (1st Cir. 1992) 19 (citing Correa-Martinez v. Arrillaga-Belendez, 903 F.2d 49, 58 (1st Cir. 1990)).

20 If the plaintiff establishes his prima facie case, the burden shifts to the defendant to 21 articulate a non-discriminatory ground for the adverse employment action and to establish, by a 22 preponderance of the evidence, that the same action would have been taken regardless of the

Civil No. 09-1692 (GAG/BJM)

1 plaintiff's political beliefs. Mt. Healthy City School Dist. Bd. of Educ. v. Doyle, 429 U.S. 274, 2 287 (1977). In response, the plaintiff may rebut the non-discriminatory reason, either 3 circumstantially or directly, by producing evidence that that discrimination was more likely than 4 not a motivating factor. Padilla-Garcia, 212 F.3d at 77 (citations omitted). Ultimately, summary 5 judgment is only warranted if the defendants produce evidence that political discrimination did 6 not constitute a "but for" cause for the adverse employment action. Mendez-Aponte v. Puerto 7 Rico, 656 F. Supp. 2d 277, 285 (D.P.R. 2009).

A. Prima Facie Case

9 The court again concludes that the plaintiffs have established a prima facie case of 10 political discrimination. The defendants' previous motions for summary judgment were 11 essentially the same as the motion presently before the court. In the previous motions, the 12 defendants argued that the plaintiffs failed to state a prima facie case of political discrimination.
13 Specifically, they argued that the defendants did not know the political affiliation of the plaintiffs 14 at the time. (Docket Nos. 46 at 4; 150 at 4; 152 at 4; 154 at 11.) Additionally, they argued that 15 the defendants were not personally involved in any adverse employment action the plaintiffs 16 suffered. (Docket Nos. 154 at 11; 156 at 15.)

17 In the instant motion, the defendants again argue that the plaintiffs have failed to plead 18 facts to support a prima facie case of political discrimination. However, the defendants have 19 pointed to no facts or circumstances to distinguish this motion from their previous motions for 20 summary judgment, which the court denied after concluding that material issues of fact preclude 21 summary judgment. Neither can the court discern any facts or circumstances that would now 22 make summary judgment appropriate.

Civil No. 09-1692 (GAG/BJM)

1 The First Circuit has also already held that the plaintiffs satisfied their burden of pleading 2 facts to support a prima facie case of political discrimination in its opinion on the appeal of the 3 motion to dismiss. (Docket No. 214). The First Circuit evaluated the defendants' argument that 4 the plaintiffs failed to allege facts indicating that the defendants had knowledge of the plaintiffs' 5 political affiliation and that political affiliation was a substantial or motivating factor for the 6 adverse employment action. (Docket No. 214 at 11-14; 15-20.) The First Circuit determined that 7 the plaintiffs made "a number of non-conclusory allegations that together support the inference 8 that the defendants knew of their political affiliations." (Docket No. 214 at 12.) Additionally, the 9 First Circuit found that the letters the plaintiffs sent to the remaining defendants sufficed to put 10 them on notice of the alleged violations. (Docket No. 214 at 20.) Whether the defendants 11 actually received these letters is "a factual question appropriate for jury determination." (Id. at 12 19) (quoting Rodriguez-Garcia v. Municipality of Caguas, 495 F.3d 1, 13 (1st Cir. 2007)).

B. Non-discriminatory Basis for Adverse Employment Action

13 In the instant motion for summary judgment, the defendants again do not provide a non-14 discriminatory basis for any adverse employment action. Instead, the defendants repeat the same 15 arguments that this court and the Court of Appeals have already rejected regarding the plaintiffs' 16 failure to state a prima facie case. Therefore, the court concludes that there remain material 17 disputes of fact, including as to the basis for the adverse employment actions suffered by the 18 plaintiffs.

C. Qualified Immunity

20 Defendants also raise the affirmative defense of qualified immunity. (Docket No. 251 at 21 16.) Qualified immunity protects government officials "from liability for civil damages insofar as

Civil No. 09-1692 (GAG/BJM)

1 their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a 2 reasonable person would have known.” Pearson v. Callahan, 555 U.S. 223, 231 (2009). A court 3 must decide whether the plaintiff has presented facts demonstrating that he suffered a violation of 4 a constitutional right, and whether that right was “clearly established” at the time of the alleged 5 violation. Maldonado v. Fontanes, 568 F.3d 263, 269 (1st Cir. 2009). Importantly, whether 6 defendants are entitled to qualified immunity “is a legal question for the court to decide.”
7 Rodriguez-Marin v. Rivera-Gonzalez, 438 F.3d 72, 78 (1st Cir. 2006).

8 The court notes that the defendants merely recite the governing doctrine and background 9 for qualified immunity analysis. The defendants fail to articulate any basis for the court to find 10 that qualified immunity should apply to these defendants in this case, merely stating that they 11 “did address Plaintiffs Méndez and Medina’s complaints and that they acted reasonably and 12 without political animus.” (Docket No. 251 at 17.)

13 Nonetheless, First Circuit precedent has clearly and consistently established that reduction 14 in responsibility, when alleged in the context of a political discrimination claim, violates the First 15 Amendment. E.g. Agosto-de-Feliciano v. Aponte-Roque, 889 F.2d 1209, 1218 (1st Cir. 1989) 16 (abrogated on other grounds by Maldonado, 568 F.3d at 263). Thus, the court concludes that the 17 defendants are not entitled to qualified immunity because the constitutional rights at issue were 18 clearly established at the time of the alleged violations. See also Acevedo-Garcia v. Vera-19 Monroig, 204 F.3d 1, 5-6 (1st Cir. 2000) (holding that defendants who argued they “acted in an 20 objectively reasonable manner . . .” were not entitled to qualified immunity because “the law 21 protecting [plaintiffs] from the politically-motivated changes in work conditions and 22 responsibilities was clearly established.”).
